The 2008 GURU seems very different this year, a little green and particularly on opening laced with grapefruit notes on the rather intense and gripping finish. I was impressed with the intensity of the finish and the sharp bursts of acidity, but my mouth did pucker on occasion due to that grapefruit nuance. I ultimately decided that I rather liked this, and it benefited greatly from aeration and warmth—but it perhaps reminded me more of Vinho Verde than a typical Guru. I also had a flash of Loire Sauvignon Blanc—although it certainly doesn't taste like Sauvignon Blanc. It comes in at just 12.5% alcohol—a lot of Vinhos Verdes beat that these days. Drink now-2012.

Fourth vintage. Very old vines. Field blend, all new oak, barrel fermented and five months ageing. Schist and granite. Picked end Aug/beginning Sep.

Very fine and mineral. Lots of citrus and minerality. Really quite intense and taut and almost too young. 12.5% Drink 2010-11
